Cultural Gap Bridged / New Teacher Website Brings Systemic Change

Tucson, Arizona -- May 18, 2004 -- TheLessonMachine.Com, a new subscription based classroom resources site uses folklore, geography and regional animal units to celebrate the commonality of all world cultures, while recognizing the diversity of each. “This is a time in our world when fear is driving us further away from our fellow world citizens,” says company founder Myscha Theriault. “We need to bridge the cultural gap.”

Using folklore, legends and fairy tales from around the world, TheLessonMachine.Com provides comprehensive lessons or “units” for teachers with full spelling, comprehension and vocabulary assessment support. “We provide everything the teacher needs to make this function in the classroom,” says Theriault, “which is where we believe systemic change in international misconceptions will begin. Celebrating the rich positive aspects of world cultures in a nurturing classroom environment removes the fear that has become so prevalent.”

“We are particularly proud of the Middle East materials on TheLessonMachine.Com,” says Theriault. “Our geography, folklore, Ibn Battuta and Kuwait Heritage modules are very thorough.” Free samples of the company’s products are also available at <http://www.thelessonmachine.com>.
