New Education Model Provides Multicultural Resources With Comprehensive Subject Integration

Tucson, Arizona –June 8, 2004 -- TheLessonMachine.Com, the new online curriculum subscription service, is based on the belief that all cultures should be adequately represented within the instructional framework. Their integrated subject matter with a theme oriented approach provides the basis necessary for a true multicultural program. “We believe in celebrating the world mosaic through both its diversities and similarities,” states company founder M. Theriault. “But we believe in doing so within an academically sound framework. The topics of our learning modules are multicultural in nature. However, it’s the full subject integration and comprehensive teacher support materials that ensure this program’s use in a global environment.”

When asked why she launched this program with a strong focus on international folklore and heritage, Theriault had this to say, “Folklore is the link that unites us all. It honors our similarities while simultaneously respecting our diversity. Only through awareness and understanding of other cultures and belief systems can we begin to release our fear, moving forward to an era of mutual acceptance and world citizenship.”
