TheLessonMachine.Com Meets Teacher, Student and Admin Needs/ Lesson Plans Are Convenient, Economical and Culturally Necessary

Tucson, Arizona -- April 21, 2004 -- Student centered materials in a teacher friendly format that meet the economic needs of today's learning institutions. Sound impossible? Enter, TheLessonMachine.Com. This subscription based curriculum site offers the latest in end – user flexibility at an ultra – affordable price. “The time has come for a program like this,” says company founder, Myscha Theriault. “It shouldn't cost a fortune for school districts and Homeschoolers to implement a quality program. Our materials give them the framework to do that.”

Theriault also feels the format of the company's products is very important. “Teachers squeeze every available second out of their already busy schedules. The last thing they need is a program that's difficult to use. We remove that stress for them by providing full vocabulary and spelling support, comprehension materials and creative, holistic extension activities. Everything they could possibly need for their weekly language arts program is already there.”
